

7
Although similar in that significant sectionalism had developed much earlier w/ colonial identity & differing pull factors there were more differences post-market revolution because of the economic shift from self-sustenance to mass-production & consumption. Socially as more women left the home to work, achieving limited economic & personal freedoms, & politically as western frontier states created political systems that no longer required property ownership to participate!

BOOM